LEE HIGH STUDENTS RECOGNIZED BY NTHS

On May 8, 2013, Valley Vocational Technical Center held its annual induction ceremony of the National Technical Honor Society. Chelsea Steele, a senior at Robert E. Lee High was inducted into the NTHS. Chelsea completed the nurse aid program at Valley Vocational Technical Center and passed the state certification exam on May 12, 2013. Chelsea has already started using her education, as she is working as a CNA at the Kings Daughters Nursing and Rehab Center in Staunton, Virginia. Chelsea plans to continue her studies at Blue Ridge Community College and/or James Madison University. She plans to study nursing or education.

The National Technical Honor Society (NTHS) was formed in 1984 to highlight and proclaim the successes of Career and Technical Education (CTE) students. The overall goal of the society is to see that deserving technical students are recognized and that people of the community become aware of the talent and abilities of the young people and adults who choose technical pathways to a successful future. The purpose of the society is to identify and honor student achievement and leadership, to promote educational excellence, and to enhance career opportunities for its membership.

Two additional students from Robert E. Lee High School were inducted to the NTHS in 2012: Selena Clark-Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) and Brittany Hartless-Emergency Medical Technician (EMT). Lee High salutes these three students.
